New Job For Chief

Curtis Does Swahili Bellydancing

by Ima Pigg
Staff Reporter

Last week, senior Teresa Curtis got a new job. No longer will she be forced to withstand the hum-drum existence of being Editor-in-chief of The Bull. Teresa has a new mission.

After many long, grueling auditions, Teresa has finally done it. She has succeeded in becoming the first blond haired, fair skinned swahili bellydancer in the world.

Curtis has been aspiring this title since she was an infant living in Hawaii. As a child she would practice the hula hoop day in and day out.

As a teen, she continued her hula hoop training which ultimately gave her her svelte figure.

Teresa became a competitive swahili bellydancer in high school. She was voted "Most Likely To Rub Bellies" by her graduating class.

Her first year at college, Teresa attended the University of Virginia, but was frequently shunned by many of the wahoos.

According to Teresa, "Those UVA'ers have no class. They wouldn't know a good swahili bellydancer if one danced on their faces!"

So after only a few short weeks away, Teresa left UVA and returned home to Stafford where she spent over nine grueling hours per day practicing her art.

The following semester, Teresa found her true home at Mary Wash. The liberal, open-minded students at MWC accepted their first swahili bellydancer with open arms.

Curtis frequently attempted to teach her roommates, Nancy Erps and Beth Goeller, how to hula hoop.

Unfortunately, they just didn't get the hang of it. Teresa chalked it up to, "general uncoordination."

Teresa began the National Swahili Bellydancing Championships last summer when she traveled to Uganda, Africa. There, she faced over 100 competitors, none of whom spoke English.

Teresa did not let the language barrier stop her. She told reporters, "Who needs words? We speak the international body language."

Over the three day competition, Teresa was voted Ms. Congenitality, as well as being the favorite to win the title.

On day one, the best body competition was held. Here the judges looked for: size of belly button, body hair, and muscle tone.

Teresa received a score of 9. The judges were heard to comment, "We would've given her a 10, but she had a little too much hair around the navel area."

The pelvic thrust competition was held on day two. Teresa received a perfect score in this division.

When asked where she learned to thrust so well Teresa replied, "I owe it all to Andy Gibb. I used to sit and watch him for hours. I just loved the way the bulge in his pants seemed to shoot towards the screen when I wore my 3-D glasses!"

The body shimmer competition occurred on the third and final day of the event. Judges compared the movement of the stomach to that of jello being shaken in a bowl.

Teresa only received a score of 8 in the body shimmer division. She attributed the low score to her lack of body fat.

Teresa said, I only have .001 percent body fat, you know."

The award presentation was held at the Ooga Booga Beach Resort and Health Spa. A crowd of over 700 gathered for the event.

Teresa was crowned with a ceremonial veil, and performed her favorite routine for the audience.

Congratulations Teresa!! You've made Mary Washington proud.

Sex Programs Arouse

by Sticky Benson
Staff Reporter

Due to the tremendous success of the past mandatory programs, a new line of mandatory programming will be conducted next fall.

According to Dean Malone, students have responded overwhelmingly in favor of the recent AIDS campus wide programs and of the birth control for freshmen programs.

At the recent mandatory AIDS program, students were trained in the practices of safe sex. "I bring my own," revealed an anonymous Westmoreland female.

Live demonstrations by Dean Malone and S.A. President Don Apparius showed students how to use the condom.

Apparius reminds students that condoms are a great deal, costing only three for a quarter.

At the birth control program, Nurse Florence Robingale encouraged students to be responsible and plan ahead. Nurse Robingale recommended "the pill" as the most effective method (next to "no").

If students use condoms, she suggests using a little mint jelly on the tip of the condom to heighten the male's sexual arousal.

Students took notes.

Reportedly, students enjoy giving up hours of their free time in order to become better sexually educated.

"Hands-on" workshops are scheduled for the next semester with such topics as fondling and foreplay on the agenda.

Sophomore Matt Swaim is ecstatic. Swaim comments, "The whole reason I came to MWC was to learn about and explore my sexual horizons."

Next fall, the office of Residence Life will require all students to attend programs on varying sexual techniques, promoting sexual freedom, and raising children. Many experts will be called in.

Guest speaker Dr. Ruth will kick-off the nationwide "Just Say Yes" campaign on Ball Circle.

College President Bill Anderson is personally responsible for bringing the "Just Say Yes" movement to MWC.

Students are encouraged to attend the rally. Complimentary condoms will be distributed.

"Rhonda the Human Condom" to make appearance at next year's mandatory AIDS workshops.

Who is the Campus Gigolo?

by TED E. BARE
Staff Reporter

Mary Washington College police announced last night that they finally solved the mystery of 'The Campus Gigolo.'

Police Chief Jones stated that the force had "finally stopped 'The Gigolo' in his tracks."

Well-known student leader, C. J. Bradshaw III, was indicted for the portrayal of the Campus Gigolo.

Bradshaw, the 1988-89 Student Association vice president and Senate president, was cornered last night while sneaking around Virginia Hall.

When stopped by a campus policeman, Bradshaw attempted to act naturally. But, the policeman was not to be fooled.

She knew immediately that she had found the culprit, for she recognized the jacket which Bradshaw was wearing from the description given by the many victims.

Officer Jane Smith requested that Bradshaw step away from the window into which he was staring, with his hands raised high above his head.

Smith reported that Bradshaw stepped into the lighted pathway and, with a dejected look, said, "Well, what can I say?"

Bradshaw was brought to the station for questioning, at which time he formally confessed to being The Campus Gigolo.

This recent mystery began when a young girl named Maryanne (the names of all the girls have been changed to protect their innocence) came forward, pleading with campus police to help her find this man who wooed her, then soon after, left her. "We thought this to be quite out of the ordinary," said Chief Jones. "Never before had personal problems such as this been brought to our attention. Therefore, we simply attempted to calm Maryanne, sent her back to her dorm room, and then forgot all about it."

But the problem did not end with Maryanne. Days later another young girl, Sue, came into the station, tears streaming down her face, crying "Please help me!"

Her story was the same as Maryanne's. This man promised to spend his remaining days at the college with her, if she would only stay true to him.

Of course, as any other young woman who is given attention by an older man, Sue fell deeply in love with this man. To her surprise, the attention only lasted a few days, and then he was gone.

This pattern continued for weeks, and the police knew there was a problem which they had to resolve. The twist to the plot was that each girl had given them a different name. The force was in a quandary.

The only clues they had were the man moved quickly, only remaining with the same young girl for a maximum of three weeks; he treated each girl as if she were a queen; and oddly enough, all the girls were under the age of 19—apparently the man was either not able to attract the attention of the older women, or he simply enjoyed the dominant role of the 'older man.'

The first step taken by the police was to place flyers on the tables of Seacobeck asking for any information that would be helpful in solving this mystery. A reward was offered.

Help came in the unexpected source of an anonymous letter. The letter was from the supposed lover of Bradshaw.

She stated that she had suspected Bradshaw of "running around" but had never thought it would come to this. She had become suspicious when she continually saw Bradshaw's tripod set up in his room and various pieces of lingerie (which she knew were not her own, for these were of varying colors and she wore only red) strewn about all over the room.

She stated that she questioned Bradshaw, but he denied that anything unusual had been going on. He said that he was trying to find a shot that he could enter in a photography contest for Victoria Secret.

The anonymous lover wrote that she became even more suspicious after answering phone calls for Bradshaw and the person on the other end would hang up. She said this was what finally gave her the impression that there was another woman.

She hired a free-lance photographer to follow Bradshaw when he went anywhere, especially to his office at the Campus Center, since his office hours were during the late hours of the evening.

To her surprise, there was not just another woman, there were other

Honor Prez Caught in the Act

"I swear I didn't do it!" cried Honor Council President Beverly Newman, when accused of cheating on her geography final.

Dr. Damron, Newman's geography professor, stated that several students had become suspicious of Newman's repeated trips to the bathroom.

women!! The photographer caught Bradshaw in various places with at least ten young girls.

After hearing about the complaints and the case of 'The Campus Gigolo,' she could not hold back the information any longer. She then wrote this letter, accusing her own lover of this crime.

She could only site one reason for this behavior. "Maybe he was too bored with our life together. Maybe he wanted to feel young again," she said. "I do remember how he would worry and complain whenever he saw a wrinkle forming on my face."

Bradshaw's trial will be held during Exam Week at MWC. At the time of printing, Bradshaw had not yet been assigned an attorney.

Bradshaw only had one comment to make to the press last night. He said, "I was just being myself. Everyone is making such a big deal about it, and all I was trying to do was have some fun!"

After concluding that it is not humanly possible to urinate as often as Ms. Newman was claiming, several classmates decided to investigate the situation further.

Mary Shirley, a fellow student, decided to follow Newman on one of her potty expeditions.

Mary reported following Newman into the bathroom, and observing her enter the left stall.

After hearing exclamations such as, "Where in the Hell is Saudi Arabia" and "what is the f-ing continental drift," Mary knew something was rotten in the women's bathroom.

Ms. Shirley continued to hide in the stall, and remained until Newman had left. Upon investigation, Ms. Shirley discovered maps of the Middle East and various geographical terms taped to the door of Newman's stall.

Mary quickly rushed back into the exam room to wait for Newman's next potty break. She didn't have to wait long.

Newman soon got up, mumbling about something she had eaten the night before, and proceeded to the bathroom. Ms. Shirley and several suspicious students followed her.

They quickly apprehended Newman in her cheat stall, while she was looking for the location of the Jordan River.

Ms. Newman claimed the notes taped to the stall door were not hers, and that she hadn't even noticed them before.

Ms. Newman could only plead, "I've never cheated in my life. This is a terrible case of being at the wrong place at the wrong time!"

Ms. Newman requested a closed trial, but it has been denied. It is reported that the administration wants to make an example out of Newman.

President Bill Anderson stated, "I think this is great. MWC hasn't had a good, juicy scandal in a long time."

Dr. Damron stated, "If the faculty had only abolished self-scheduling, none of this would have happened."

Studs Improve

Since the beginning of the male athletic program at MWC, the foreign language requirement has been the prime cause of athletes not graduating.

In a desperate attempt to curb this tragic problem, Hamlet House will become the Italian House for athletes this fall.

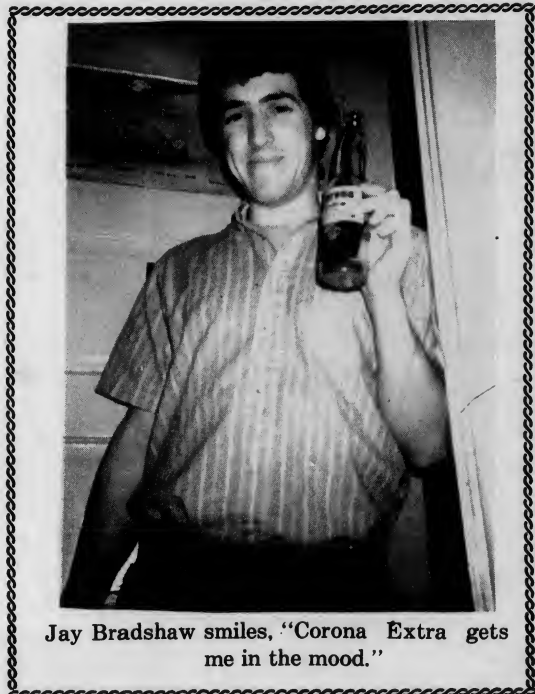

Italian Professor C. Ascari, was elated when he heard of this proposal and promised to help form a study program for members of the house.

Pat McAleer, Head Resident of Custis Hall, thinks this is long overdue. "When I leave Italian class for lunch I feel so isolated because I don't have anyone to speak Italian with."

"Yes" adds Jay Bradshaw, current Hamlet House President. "Before football games next fall, the guys can sit around and conjugate verbs!"

After failing Italian, 202 last spring, Jay wishes the program had been started sooner.

Dog Saves Drunken Crawley

by Mike Hunt
Staff Reporter

An unfortunate "twist" occurred this spring at Dr. Crawley's semi-annual drink-til-you-drop "class" picnic.

Dr. Crawley, who is officially known as the executive assistant to the President of the college, held his usual catered affair this spring.

Several students from his American South class attended what they thought would be a mild-mannered, respectable affair.

All seemed calm at first, but many students later commented that Dr. Crawley seemed to be frequenting a certain trash can filled with an unidentified beverage.

Dr. Crawley's wife was called away on a medical emergency, and left their amazing, canine creature, "Calvin," in charge.

Calvin stalked the area. He carefully kept a watchful eye, and even forcefully attempted to restrain Crawley from getting to the brew. Eyewitness reports said that Calvin, the wonder dog, takes a breather after his heroic rescue of his master, Dr. Crawley.

Crawley made several shrewd attempts to avoid the watchful eye of Calvin. Crawley was even heard to say, "Good Lord, you would think I was the dog and he the master."

As dinner was being served, low mumbles could be heard from the students.

Did Dr. Crawley realize he was serving the hamburgers raw? Why was he hanging upside down from that tree? Did he know he had women's panties around his head?

Before anyone really knew what was happening, Dr. Crawley had fallen out of the tree, rolled down the hill, and landed unconscious in his neighbors yard.

Calvin was the first to react. The fearless canine jumped over two fences, ran through a briar patch, and dove into the 50 degree water to save his master.

The students were terrified. After a few minutes of struggling, no one was sure if Calvin or Crawley would make it out of the pool.

Calvin's strength prevailed. With his teeth, Calvin pulled Dr. Crawley from the pool and immediately placed all four paws on his masters stomach to force the water from his system.

An ambulance finally arrived and rushed both Crawley and Calvin to Mary Washington Hospital.

As it turned out, Dr. Crawley fared much better than Calvin had, only suffering from a hangover.

Calvin was instructed to get plenty of bed rest. In his rescue he had suffered a broken leg, and several deep scratches from the briar patch.

Dr. Crawley's students were convinced all those incredible things they had heard about Calvin were true.

Calvin truly was a Wonder Dog!

Beware of Towing & Tickets

by I.P. Green
Staff Reporter

Mary Washington College announced today its plans for purchasing 550 acres of timberland outside of Spotsylvania County.

Police Chief Charlie Jones explained in a news conference that the timber is needed to supply campus police officers with their own supply of paper for parking tickets.

Chief Jones stated, "We issue about 1,500 parking tickets per day. The state says we have gone past our quota for the year. They won't give us any more tickets. We have to take matters into our own hands."

Executive Vice-President and head of the Police Department, A. Ray Merchant went on to elaborate, "We can't let our officers run out of tickets. It's the only thing they enjoy. Besides, if they are not issuing tickets they wouldn't have anything to do."

Plans are now being made to clear the land and have a stock of 1 million parking tickets preprinted.

College police plan to close the Pub and use it as storage space for the tickets.

Once the land is cleared, college police plan to set-up their own towing service.

According to Chief Jones, "We lose too much money using Mer-ryman's to do our towing. If we create our own service, we can bring in at least $1,000 per week."

The towing service will consist of 2 tow trucks and a 4 man staff. One truck will be stationed on College Avenue, and the other on Sunken Road.

An employee will be at the truck at all times, waiting for student violators to leave their vehicles.

To pay for the land purchase and setting up the new service, college police plan to increase their rates for the upcoming school year.

Any parking violation will be accompanied with a $75 fine. After 3 violations, the vehicle will be towed.

According to Chief Jones, "The students around here ain't that dumb. Once they see their car is gone, they will know it was either stolen by a redneck or towed by us. They'll figure it out eventually."

A student will be required to wait 10 days before getting a car back.

To get a vehicle returned, a student must wash and wax three police vehicles, and pay a $250 fine.

College officials believe that with these new sanctions the land purchase will be paid off in a short time.

Once the debt is paid, the money raised from the fines will go towards a 8 week vacation for all campus police officers.

I'll never forget that Sunday afternoon in March when Teresa said to me, "You are applying for Editor next year, aren't you?"

Suddenly it hit me. The entire staff, down to five of us at that point, was graduating.

All but little of me, of course. Did she really think this girl, a sophomore with a strong Southern accent, could run a newspaper?

Apparently she did. Teresa spent the next 30 minutes telling me how much fun it is to work on the newspaper, and how many people you meet, and how much prestige goes along with being Editor.

When I finally decided to apply for the position, all that crock flew out the window.

Suddenly it was "Thank God it's over", and "I'm glad we only have two more issues."

Teresa began to count the hours until I was the one here on Sunday nights, and she was at home on the couch watching the Sunday Night Movie.

Not that I blame her. If I have as many problems as Teresa did with this newspaper, I'll probably just resign—just kidding Debbie!

I just hope Trece knows how much I am going to miss her Sunday ~~anxiety~~ attacks.

It's no wonder that I am already a basket case when I think about this job.

I'll survive though. I love this journalism stuff. I guess I'm just a little bit nervous about doing as good of a job as Teresa did.

With the staff we have for next year, The Bull could be, and will be, an awesome newspaper.

No longer will people just read the personals, or cut out the Four Star coupons.

The new Bull is here!

All of this has lead to The Bull. The 1988-89 staff's first publication. It is a lot of fun when your first newspaper is a way you can make up lies and rag on your closest friends.

At first I expected The Bull to be a big pain. I could just see myself writing 95 percent of the stories, and only having a four page paper.

Fortunately for all of us, this hasn't happened. My new staff has spent every night for the past two weeks brainstorming and scheming to slander as many people as we can.

Everyone, all eleven of us, has made an effort. As anyone who has every worked with a group can tell you, that is pretty unusual. Most groups have one or two people who do most of the work, and usually end up getting little of the credit.

Because of the work of the entire staff, The Bull has expanded this year. For the first time in history, The Bull is twelve pages. Twelve pages of slime; trash, porn, and the various other forms of filth that the MWC students live for.

I just hope we all have some friends left by the time this is over!

Seriously guys, The Bull is just for fun. Don't take it seriously, and don't take it personally, and most importantly—don't hold a grudge!!

LETTERS

Pooh on

Self-Scheduling

To the Editor:

Who do these young upstarts think they are? Who said they have the right to self-scheduling? Who ever told them college should be convenient anyway? I'll tell you what their problem is—they have too much freedom to begin with.

They have open hours in the dorms—co-ed dorms, to boot. We never had that kind of freedom when we were in college. Hell, they even get to walk on the grass.

We thoroughly agree with the faculty members who voted down this self-scheduling nonsense to keep these little creeps from cheating.

It's all too obvious that anyone who would so flagrantly walk on the grass wouldn't think twice about cheating on finals.

Sincerely,

Two Old Fogies

Dope Dorm Demanded

To the Editor:

As a transfer student to MWC, I knew I was entering a world of conservatism. However, when I was placed in Custis, a non-smoking dorm, I personally experienced it.

A non-smoking dorm is bad enough, but when I was told there isn't even a dope-smoking dorm, I couldn't believe my ears. I mean, what kind of school is this?

It is within our constitutional rights to be able to smoke whatever we want, whenever we want, as long as we don't get caught. I have searched and searched for this "dope dorm" and have yet to find it.

Now, I know that you are out there. I know there are druggies to be found, and I also know you reside together. What I don't know, is where you are!

There is enough student apathy on this campus. The dopers should not be a part of it. Let your existence be known!

Unfortunately, this letter will be met with aggression. But, we must admit it is a force. A force to be reckoned with. Let your voice be heard!

No Campus Housing--

Hello Twilight Inn

To the Editor:

I'm like really annoyed, ya know. Its like, I don't have a place to live next year. That's like totally uncool.

But, Dean Malone promised us a suite at the Twilight Inn—my favorite motel, but I've only like stayed there for an hour at a time. And like if that bombs out they'll be rolling in those trailers.

But omigod, that's like so narly. I mean I'm not into this temporary housing thing. I want to live, like in a real dorm.

But at least I'm not stuck in a dice dorm. I like want action, ya know?

So, like the big ass BOV and administration better get it together. I'm like really PMS about all this and daddy'll sue if I don't like get on-campus.

Too Cool

Self-Scheduling

Hunger/Alcohol Strike

On Monday the 18th of April, Mary Washington students will begin a hunger strike. The strike is being staged to show the students' disapproval of the recent abolishment of self-scheduling.

For the first time in years, students are finally rallying together for a cause.

Forget world hunger. Forget social injustices. Forget minority issues. Forget the homeless. Self-scheduling is what really counts!

The strike will begin with breakfast on Monday. Over 2,000 students have signed pledges saying that they will not eat in Seacobeck until the issue is resolved.

The students hope that the strike will cause the faculty to realize how strongly the student body feels about this issue.

Will the faculty reverse their decision? Will Seacobeck have to close its doors? Will MWC students die for this cause? Will this strike attract national media attention? Will Night Line come to Fredericksburg and not mention MWC?

The faculty will be forced to listen to the pleas of the students. Or will they?

If the hunger strike does not succeed, students have vowed to take more drastic measures.

According to new S.A. President Mike Tringale, the students are prepared to give up alcohol consumption until all their demands are met.

Aren't MWC students supposed to be apathetic?

Freds Pissed Off

To the Editor:

As Fredericksburg residents, we feel we must speak out. We have held our tongues for over a year, but can do so no longer. We want our street back!!

I am speaking for many residents of the community. We have created the powerful organization, "Residents for the Road."

Our mission is to achieve the destruction of campus walk and the subsequent replacement with Campus Drive

Campus walk is pretty, and golly gee the benches are keen, but they just do not compare to Campus Drive.

Students and administration don't seem to realize what a fundamental part of our existence Campus Drive really was.

"The Good Ol' Days" best describes our lives with Campus Drive. Endless hours were spent cruising the campus.

We yelled obscenities at hot babes and honked our horns galore. Now that was cool!

These days, life is hum-drum. Park and Shop just doesn't cut it. The lanes are too narrow, and the babes aren't quite prime.

What is a Fredneck to do?

We, as a group, appeal to the college. Our existence relies on the restoration of Campus Drive. Please support our cause.

Bubba and the Residents for Road

Daddy Anderson

Babies Students

To the Editor:

"Grow up!" That's all we ever hear. Why bother growing up when Daddy Anderson and his hierarchical family do it for us?

They make our decisions, why don't they pay our tuition too?!

I wonder why we don't have a dress code...for that matter why aren't we all-female again?

I mean really, just seeing guys on campus corrupts our minds, right?

Let's see, we have an attendance policy, a visitation policy, a drinking policy, and now might lose our right, excuse me, our privilege, to self-schedule exams.

The professors, who need I remind you are getting paid to be here, are worried about too much cheating resulting from this method of examination.

I don't know about that. We pay to come here. If we feel we're losing out, we can transfer. That might be the first adult decision we are allowed to make.

Ms. Giles responded "she just couldn't decide which one Clint liked best."

Dr. Steve Stageberg was arrested last week on charges of trespassing. Stageberg was found standing on a ladder peeping into a second floor bathroom in Ball Hall. Charges are pending.

Executive Vice President, A.Ray Merchant, was arrested by campus police after he was found walking through Ball Circle.

Merchant is a repeat offender of the "no walking on the grass" charge.

Joanne Beck, Dean of Students, was arrested last weekend on charges of public drunkenness and disturbing the peace.

Beck was found staggering down campus walk carrying a fifth of Jack Daniels, and singing Jimmy Buffet's "Why Don't We Get Drunk and Screw."

Beck was sentenced to attend both the Level 1 and Level 2 education programs.

It was discovered that Dr. Paul Muick is wanted in five states on charges of polygamy. He is being extradited to Utah at this time.

Neighbors reported the men became very abusive, pounding the door and shouting "where's our damn beer?"

The suspects reportedly also threatened to break in the window.

According to police reports, the witnesses' testimony could not be considered reliable because they were too stoned to accurately recall the actual events of the night.

Police are still investigating the double slaying.

McAleer admits that if he were returning next year, he would use his influence and try to get his lacrosse teammates to live in the new Italian house.

Professor Ascari claims that frustration develops around mid-semester when most of the class can conjugate the verb "avere" in the present tense, but the athletes are still having difficulty.

"I think the fact that my athletic students bring the sports section to class is proof that they aren't applying themselves to Italian studies" Ascari says.

"Now with the Italian House for athletes, there is hope!"

Goolrick Scandal

Porsche Bought with Bribes

by Harry Dickerson
Staff Reporter

If you have been to Goolrick Gymnasium within the last couple of months, you may have noticed a new Porsche 944 in the faculty parking lot.

Many may wonder how a coach at a small school like Mary Washington can afford such a nice car.

Last week it was discovered that the women's basketball coach, Connie Gallahan, and several of her players have been accepting under the table payments for the past few years in exchange for unsuccessful seasons.

The bribes were discovered last week by the Goolrick cleaning crew as they were cleaning Gallahan's office.

Hollow books containing a large sum of money and official underground contracts were found hidden in Gallahan's bookshelf. Envelopes with player payments were also discovered.

In a press conference held yesterday, Gallahan admitted that she had been receiving underground payments the last three years in which her team had losing seasons. These payments were scheduled to go on until 1990, the year which coincides with the termination of her car payments.

Rene Thomas, a 1987 graduate, who returned this year as the MWC Assistant Coach was also indicted. Thomas was quoted as saying, "The money was too good to give up so I decided to return as assistant coach."

Several players were also indicted, and admitted to receiving as much as $5 per turnover. Freshman guard Vikki Lenhart stated that, "I made as many as ten turnovers a game so I could save up to buy a new bike."

Team captains Kim Hardy and Jennifer Payne used their earnings to spend a luxurious week in Cancun, Mexico and to buy new cars.

Center Amy Cooper had been using her earnings to ship moonshine from Franklin County to Fredericksburg.

After a complete investigation, MWC Athletic Director Ed Hegmann will meet with NCAA Commissioner Dick Shultz in Kansas City to discuss the fate of MWC women's basketball.

Freshman, Robert Hager, was chosen as the 1988-89 Mr. Universe. The judges commented, "Hager has the most unique physique we've ever seen."

MWC Football Kicks Off

by Jack Inghoff
Staff Reporter

In MWC's campaign to attract new students, especially male students, the college's admissions department has tried almost every strategy in the book.

It has touted our seven Nobel laureates, our 2 billion dollar endowment that enables us to have more student programs than we know what to do with, and, of course, Fredericksburg, the thriving metropolis we have all come to know and love in our short stay here.

The college has even made large cash payments and gifts of Italian cars to prospective honor roll and minority students.

Even with all this, student enrollment has been a problem. So it is wonderful to discover that the administration has finally come to the same conclusion that, as usual, the students came to long ago—FOOTBALL!

Next year Mary Washington will have a football team. They will, of course, be called the Mary Washington Eagles.

Plans have already been drawn and accepted for the 53,000 seat stadium which will be placed on the grounds presently taken up by the Civil War cemetery on Washington Avenue.

President Anderson virtually beamed with happiness at the press conference on Friday announcing the addition to our championship athletic program.

Anderson said, "We've been trying to find an excuse to go Division I, and I think this is the opportunity that the college has been looking for."

When asked how the stadium's location could be set on such a sacred place, he commented, "It's unfortunate that we have to put it there, but we got a good price for the land, and besides, it's just a bunch of old dead people anyway."

Anderson also announced the appointment of Roy Gordon as Head Coach. Gordon's appreciation and enthusiasm was evident as he accepted the job.

According to Gordon, "I am looking forward to being the first football coach, and have high hopes for the team. I'm really glad that I won't have to deal with those soccer fags anymore."

Student reaction around campus has been almost without exception very positive. Sophomore David Chism has already been signed as a running back.

"We like to think of him as our version of 'The Refrigerator'," said Gordon.

In anticipation of a coed program, Junior Claire Novak was excited to say, "now I'll really get to headbutt some people."

The only unhappy note came from outgoing S.A. President Don Apaparius.

Don expressed his feelings, "I played in junior high, and I'm truly disappointed that I missed out on this opportunity. I would have liked to have gotten up there on the line and kicked some ass for the Wash."

Football camp will be going on all this summer in preparation for this

Who the Hell is the BOV?

by Lois Lane
Staff Reporter

Who the hell is the BOV?

If you are like the majority of the students on this campus, you too are probably asking this question.

If there have been any policy decisions that haven't quite suited your tastes, chances are the BOV played a key role in formulating those decisions.

Who is this invisible force behind almost every action taken at this college? Well, the highly dedicated Bull staff recently set out to answer this question.

After several weeks of investigation, staff reporters found this to be an extremely difficult task. The board insists on having their identities remain top secret on this campus.

It was discovered that several attempts have been made on the lives of various board members.

In one incident, unknown groups hired kamikaze Jack Beattie to "take out" one of the members.

Beattie invaded the living room of the member on his bicycle, and repeatedly ran over the victim, while honking his horn and yelling, "Stay out of my way!"

Through dedicated teamwork, the Bull staff was able to uncover the identity of all twelve board members.

The first member was recognized by his 'neighborly' attempts to get to know the students on a more personal level—Mr. Rodgers.

When Rodgers was discovered strolling down campus walk and was asked what he was doing he replied, "I'm trying to make friends with the students so that I can better meet their needs."

After receiving several rejections, Rodgers pleaded, "Won't you be my neighbor?"

Upon hearing this, student Ken Morefield commented, "Well it's no wonder we are treated like children!"

Campus police aided in the investigation, when they accidentally uncovered the identity of two more board members.

After several pairs of shoes were reported missing, college police caught Imelda Marcos climbing out of a first floor window in Virginia hall.

Mrs. Marcos was dropping several pairs of shoes into the arms of her husband, Ferdinand.

Other board members were not surprised when the scandal broke. They had grown suspicious when Marcos made several attempts to create a shoe code for the college.

Many students complain that the BOV is too secretive and withholds information from the students.

When Colonel Oliver North was found to be a BOV member it was no surprise.

Other hot names on the BOV list were such celebrities as George Burns, and Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker.

It is reported that Burns and the Bakkers have been arguing over the campus visitation policy.

Burns is pushing for 24 hour visitation. Burns stated, "I may not have much time left. I may need every second I can get."

Jim Bakker, an advocate of two hour visitation, commented, "Two hours is enough time for me to go in and out."

Some of the decisions, like the alcohol policy, are found humorous by the students. You can thank board member Robin Williams for that.

It's at least nice to know that we have some humor on the board...isn't it?

Not all of the decisions made by the board are seen as negative by the students. For instance, board member Nancy Reagan plans to donate all the White House china to Seacobeck once her husband leaves office.

Several other board members suggested selling the china at the flea market, and using the money to hire better cooks.

Some of the more colorful board members discovered were Mickey Mouse, Papa Smurf, and perhaps the biggest surprise—Birney, the well-known Seacobeck clicker.

After all these years, we thought Birney just stood at the door to demand to see our i.d.'s. Little did we know that Birney was an undercover board member, looking for ways to improve our dining service.

So now the public knows the rest of the story about the hidden BOV.

From ball, p.8

fall's season. "Our only goal for this year is to get to one of the bowl games," said Gordon.

"We could use a little support, though," continued Gordon.

If the team does as well as expected, there should be no problem.

Students At Large

BMW Holds Four Prisoner

by Betty Boop
Staff Reporter

Since the beginning of April, four girls have been at large in a 1984, silver two door BMW. The identifying license plate cannot be given at this time.

The owner of the car has been using the excuse "they just fell off", to request new plates.

The girls may be dangerous to others as well as to themselves, and are believed to belong to a racketeering ring.

The gangsters are using the aliases: Kellster, Kimster, Bethster and Patster.

The girls in the BMW have been frequently seen between the Mary Washington College Campus and the Georgetown area of Washington, D.C.

While parked in Georgetown the car has received numerous parking tickets. The fines are still outstanding.

The foursome has frequented such places as the Third Edition,

Georgetown Park, McLean Village Apartments, and an unidentified Arlington home.

They have also attended several Sauna Club events, which resulted in an overnight stay at all four of the above mentioned locations.

There also maybe several male accomplices involved, such as BB3, Jimbo, Lyon, Daring Darren, and Kevin from Heaven.

When last seen, the girls were wearing several distinguishing outfits. Patster was wearing an entirely green sweater and skirt, most appropriate for Saint Patty's Day.

Bethster was wearing matching peach silk blouse, skirt, bra and undies. BB3 may be contacted for further information.

Kelster has been seen in many ensembles. She is known to pin her bra and camisole together; only those close to her will be able to help in identifying her.

Kimster has been observed in a rather expensive Ralph Lauren skirt, and constantly saying "Please don't ask how much I paid for it!"

The four gangsters are still at large. If any of them or their car are spotted, please do not report them. Having fun at MWC is a felony.

Beachfront Murders

by Harry Henderson
Staff Reporter

Two MWC students were murdered in Myrtle Beach, S.C. over Easter Holiday.

Nancy Sullivan and Shelley Harter were found dead in room 412 of the Lancer Hotel. The two students were found by fellow student Kelly Giles.

Ms. Giles had been to a romantic rendez-vous on the beach, and returned to the Lancer to find the window of the room busted and her friends dead on the floor.

The police arrived to find both students on the floor, covered with barbeque potato chips.

The autopsy showed Ms. Harter to have a small amount of marijuana in her system, and a large amount of beer-Busch beer.

Also found were large bruises on the victim's breast- the student had obviously been attacked, and made some attempt to fight off the assailant.

Several neighbors reported hearing Harter say, "Robbie, I'm not going to have sex. I want to go to sleep now."

Sullivan, the second victim, was found with her bra half-way removed and her mini-skirt unfastened. Ms. Sullivan also had large burn scars across her thumb.

McDonald's Chicken McNugget sauce covered the victim's arm and skirt. She is also believed to have consumed large quantities of beer before her death.

Harter was apparently strangled with a bread bag while Sullivan died from injuries to the head— apparently from being beaten with a Coke bottle.

After further investigation by the police, several witnesses were found.

Hotel neighbors reported two males approximately, 20 years of age, seen at the scene of the crime.

The two males, driving a black Suzuki Samurai, were seen bringing luggage into room 412, and then leaving.

At approximately 3:05 a.m., the two men returned to the Lancer to find their luggage on the balcony.

McAleer Struts to Chippendale Success

by Hardin Long
Staff Reporter

According to inside sources, Pat McAleer, Head Resident of Custis dorm, has succeeded in becoming MWC's first professional Chippendale.

Dean Beck helped McAleer get the job through her recommendations to good friend and owner of Chippendales, Hugh E. Rection.

"It will be good publicity for Mary Washington," said Dean Beck, "It will show people what we're made of...well some of us."

Beck also believes the experience will help McAleer in his head resident position. As a result, he will never be at a loss for a program.

Occasionally, McAleer entertains his Custis residents with practice performances. Most of the girls leave the acts with a smile. This is allegedly how McAleer raised money for his trip to California over Spring Break.

Michelle Benner was spotted leaving a performance running to Mason, while Benner's roommate, Stephanie Erwin, was frantically dialing the phone to Jefferson.

Residents of 207, Leslie Whitner and Sue Bunch were also pleased with one of his performances.

Whitner and Bunch led the fans in "Encore!!" cheers to which McAleer immediately obliged.

Senior Lisa Alberse was overheard saying, "I've known Pat since my freshman year and never knew he had this kind of talent. He's amazing."

McAleer will begin his nation-wide summer tour using the code name "Pat McGroin." His G-String will consist of lacrosse stick webbing which will be retired at the end of the summer in a ceremony hosted by Dean Beck.

"I've known Pat since my freshman year and never knew he had that kind of talent. He's amazing!"

"McGroin" has chosen his favorite song by AC/DC to perform to, "I've Got Big Balls." His encore song will be "My Red Joystick" by Lou Reed.

"McGroin" has been borrowing butter from Seacobeck to save on "greasing up" expenses. He has also been spotted practicing his pelvic thrusts in his apartment in preparation for his first show on May 10.

Props for his show will include three lacrosse balls which he will juggle through his legs. This will make it a five ball performance. "McGroin" will also be practicing body checks with his fans throughout the show.

"McGroin" has been looking forward to becoming a Chippendale since he was a child. He says he can not remember ever wanting something so bad.

"McGroin" hopes that this summer's experiences will help further promote his pending modeling career. Ultimately, he would like to be on the centerfold of the pin-up magazine "Lacrosse Studs."

When asked about his expectations for the summer ahead, "McGroin's" only response was, "It gets me excited."

Pat "McGroin" McAleer struts his stuff for MWC.

True Love Revealed

by Ben Dover
Staff Reporter

There comes a time in a man's life when he realizes his true preference. Unfortunately for Mary Washington College, two of the too few men have reached this point in their lives.

Juniors Tim Severo and Phil Cronin have recently realized their true, undying passion for one another. They announced their discovery at the Junior Ring Dance and left their dates, Cathi Connell and Chris Young, in despair.

"How could they do this to us?" the girls cried in anguish. The girls drowned their sorrows all night and contemplated vowing off guys forever. The next day, they joined NOW.

Miraculously, Severo and Cronin will be working together next year in Willard as Resident Assistants. They will be living on the same floor, just a few rooms away from one another. They claim that they did not plan it this way, but are happy about the convenience.

Fingers are being pointed at the administration to change the working arrangement. Protesters are claiming the two will not carry out their full responsibilities as a result of their new awareness of one another.

Dean Malone backed the Residence Life decision and firmly stated that they "will not be replaced." She also pointed out the possibility that the situation might be beneficial to their jobs.

They can now plan some swell programs together," claimed Malone. (This reporter has never noticed Malone's lisp before.)

Severo and Cronin are both members of the MWC Rugby Club. President, Dennis Mondoro, responded to the announcement by drinking a bottle of Tequila and passing out at ten o'clock. The next morning, Mondoro appointed Cronin the team secretary.

Although Severo plays A-side and Cronin plays B-side, they claim there is no competition between them. Severo has been helping Cronin improve through practice and the two hope to play with one another soon. One of their favorite pastimes is to practice tackling on each other, but have found they prefer to land on something soft. The two also enjoy going to the ballet and take pleasure in growing their plants.

As for the summer, the two plan to follow Pat "McGroin" McAleer on his summer tour with Chippendales. They have recently purchased T-shirts that say "Groin Groupies".
